Health Economics · Public Finance · Inclusive Growth · Inequality and Poverty · Macroeconomic Shocks · Panel Data Econometrics

ABOUT

My research sits at the intersection of health economics, public finance, and inclusive growth, with a focus on producing policy-relevant empirical evidence. Between 2021 and 2024, I worked full-time in digital marketing analytics before returning to my doctoral studies, an experience that deepened my applied data skills and broadened my perspective on evidence-based decision-making.
